Marcos Designs: Privacy Policy

Last updated: October 19, 2026

Marcos Designs is a small web design business run by a high school student in Georgia, USA.

This policy explains what information I collect through this site, what I do with it, and what I don't do with it.

What I collect

When you fill out the contact form, I receive:

- Your name
- Your email address
- Your business name
- Your project description

That's it. There are no accounts or logins on this site, and I don't ask for payment details through the form.

How the form works

The contact form is handled by FormSubmit (formsubmit.co), a third-party service that takes what you type and emails it to me at designmrcs@agentmail.to. FormSubmit acts as a processor here:

it passes your message along so I can read it. Its handling of the data is covered by its own privacy policy, which you can read on its website.

How I use your information

I use what you send me to:

- Reply to your message
- Talk through your project and send you a quote
- Do the work if you decide to hire me

I won't add you to a mailing list or send you marketing emails unless you ask me to.

What I don't do

I don't sell your information, rent it out, or trade it to anyone. I only share it when I have to, such as with the services that make this site and my email work, or if the law requires it.

How long I keep it

I keep project emails as long as I need them to finish the work and keep basic records, such as what was agreed and what was paid. If we don't end up working together, you can ask me to delete your messages at any time.

Your choices

You can email me to:

- Ask what information I have about you
- Ask me to correct it
- Ask me to delete it

I'll do my best to respond within a reasonable time, usually a few days.

Children

This site is meant for businesses and adults looking for a website. It isn't aimed at children under 13, and I don't knowingly collect information from them.

Changes

If I change this policy, I'll update the date at the top of this page.
